Relationships between Microbial Community Structure and

Knowledge about the relationship between microbial community structure and hydrogeochemistry (e.g., pollution, redox and degradation processes) in landfill leachate-polluted aquifers is required to develop tools for predicting and monitoring natural attenuation. In this study analyses of pollutant and redox chemistry were conducted in parallel

Investigation of slag containing refractory materials for

Sample 0A and the slag containing refractory materials have nearly the same open porosity but show different corrosion performance. Again, this means in turn that the similar chemistry of the slag and the refractory plays an important role but small amounts of brown coal ash in alumina are enough to show this effect.
